This comparison summarize characteristics of all protection relay types described in previously published technical articles:

Comparison of Protection Relay Types

The electromechanical protective relay converts the voltages and currents to magnetic and electric forces and torques that press against spring

The Good Old Electromechanical Protective Relay

In electronics, a center tap (CT) is a contact made to a point halfway along a winding of a transformer or inductor, or along the element of a resistor or a potentiometer. Taps are sometimes used on inductors for the coupling of signals, and may not necessarily be at the half-way point, but rather, closer to one end.

Center tap - Wikipedia

A transformer is a static electrical device that transfers electrical energy between two or more circuits through electromagnetic induction. A varying current in one coil of the transformer produces a varying magnetic field, which in turn induces a varying electromotive force (emf) or "voltage" in a second coil. Power can be transferred between the two coils, without a metallic connection ...
