La hipertermia maligna (HM) es una complicación potencialmente mortal que ocurre durante la anestesia general. Se caracteriza por un aumento de la temperatura corporal, taquicardia, rigidez muscular y acidosis metabólica. El diagnóstico se basa en la historia clínica y el examen físico. El tratamiento incluye la administración de dantroleno y el soporte vital. La prevención de la HM es fundamental y se logra mediante el uso de técnicas de anestesia segura y el monitoreo cuidadoso del paciente.
