The following is a list of people who are considered a "father" or "mother" (or "founding father" or "founding mother") of a scientific field. Such people are generally regarded to have made the first significant contributions to and/or delineation of that field; they may also be seen as "a" rather than "the" father or mother of the field. Debate over who merits the title can be perennial.

Acidified milk products like yoghurt are an important food product but there are relatively few reports on the mechanisms involved in gel formation and the effects of processing variables such as heat treatment and gelation temperature on the important physical properties (such as whey separation) of acid-induced gels.

Laccases have received much attention from researchers in last decades due to their ability to oxidise both phenolic and non-phenolic lignin related compounds as well as highly recalcitrant environmental pollutants, which makes them very useful for their application to several biotechnological processes.

Regulatory T lymphocytes are essential to maintain homeostasis of the immune system, limiting the magnitude of effector responses and allowing the establishment of immunological tolerance. Two main types of regulatory T cells have been identifiedâ€”natural and induced (or adaptive)â€”and both play significant roles in tuning down effector immune responses.
