But, in fact, we cannot do this. The two inequalities $x^2 > x$ and $x > 1$ are not the same. This is because in the inequality $x > 1$, x is clearly greater than 1. But in the inequality $x^2 > x$ we have to take into account the possibility that x is negative, since if x is negative, x^2 (which must be positive or zero) is always greater than x .

In mathematics, the isoperimetric inequality is a geometric inequality involving the surface area of a set and its volume. In n -dimensional space the inequality lower bounds the surface area of a set S , by its volume $V(S)$, where S is a unit ball. The equality holds when S is a ball in \mathbb{R}^n . On a plane, i.e. when $n=2$, the isoperimetric inequality relates square of the circumference of a ...
