A telescopic sight, commonly called a scope, is an optical sighting device that is based on a refracting telescope. They are equipped with some form of graphic image pattern (a reticle) mounted in an optically appropriate position in their optical system to give an accurate aiming point. Telescopic sights are used with all types of systems that require accurate aiming but are most commonly found ...

In optics, polarized light can be described using the Jones calculus, discovered by R. C. Jones in 1941. Polarized light is represented by a Jones vector, and linear optical elements are represented by Jones matrices. When light crosses an optical element the resulting polarization of the emerging light is found by taking the product of the Jones matrix of the optical element and the Jones ...

Intensity in the wave theory. The intensity of electromagnetic radiation is the time average ($\langle \hat{e} \rangle$) of the Poynting vector = In media without dispersion with the energy density it holds the relationship with the group velocity as = The intensity is proportional to the square of the amplitude of the wave: $I \propto A^2$. In a monochromatic, linearly polarized electromagnetic wave in ...
